Sands Bros. Old Building Remodeled, Enlarged and Greatly Beautified.

The Result of Shrewd Management and Enterprise Clearly Illustrated.

Fall and Winter Goods on Display—A Grand Opening to Begin Next Wednesday.

Keeping pace with the many substantial improvements made in this city during the year, the dry goods house of Sands Bros. has taken a front rank in beautifying and remodeling the building in which a heavy trade has been enjoyed during the past twenty years. The firm of Sands Bros. is known all over Montana as one of the leading dry goods emporiums of the northwest. It is strictly a dry goods house which the resident partner, Mr. Morris Sands, by his keen appreciation of the demands and needs of the people of Helena, and by honest dealing and a carefully selected stock of the best goods purchasable has built up a business for his house second to none in the northwest.

The house as it stands to-day is a model of beauty and the largest dry goods store in the city.

The old store has been taken to pieces and practically renewed, with the exception of the walls, and another story added to it. The old store front with its small granite arches, which shut off a good share of the light, and which was a relic of the old pioneer days, having been built in 1850 soon after the fire which swept the street, has been taken out and replaced with light and graceful iron columns and forged grille work, and the show windows, which are recessed back from the street, are filled with the finest of plate glass, in two large sheets. The transoms above are filled with stained glass in a chaste and beautiful design, which is brilliant without being gaudy.

Above the show window is a new front of modern design built of Montana stones; one a dull blue granite from near Great Falls, the other a beautiful blue marble from the quarries just east of this city. These are laid in alternate courses, giving a fine contrast and harmony of color and in well in keeping with the character of the whole design, which is modern "Romanesque," now so much in vogue and which seems so well adapted to the needs of American architecture. While this part of the example is very plain, yet it is also very rich in appearance and has a dignity of expression rarely found in so small a structure. The proportions are pleasing and well managed, and the detail is rich with out being vulgarly pretentious. The selection of such a design is only another evidence of the good taste which one would look for in so successful a dry goods merchant.

Inside of the store the change for the better and to modern modes of trade are still more apparent. The upper floor, which has been added and which is designed for the purpose of showing to the best advantage parts of their large stock which they have never been able to show before, is reached by means of a new passenger elevator, elegant in its design and of the latest pattern, which takes one to the upper floor with no more exertion than would be required to pass into another room. In addition to this they have an elegant stairway, finished in antique oak, leading to the upper floor, which is very light and cheerful and shows off the goods kept there to great advantage, several large skylights furnishing light in addition to the light from the wide windows at either end. They also furnish light to the main floor by means of glass floors and a gallery light.

This second floor was added, the old roof taken off the new front put in and all the other work which this necessitated, including the putting in of new floor beams, to carry the story of this new building, all without interfering with the usual trade in the store and with very little interruption or diminution of the large trade which this firm enjoys.

All these improvements were designed and the successful completion of the work supervised by the well known architects, Messrs. Shindler & Reed.

Besides the extensive improvements executed by the architect, the artist has enhanced the attractiveness of the establishment in a pleasant and unobtrusive degree. Handsome moldings and borders set off a pale blue ceiling and walls, the design being perfectly harmonious.

While all these improvements have been made the stock of goods has not been overlooked. The fall and winter supply is daily arriving and being placed on exhibition. When the store was visited yesterday it was crowded with people in the dry goods department, while the polite attendants in the cloak and carpet departments on the second floor, had all they could do to attend to the customers there. Mr. Morris Sands was constantly engaged in receiving and showing the many ladies to the different departments and receiving the congratulations of all upon the beauty of the new store.

The main floor is divided into five departments. To the right as you enter is the notion, hosiery and corset department, in charge of Martin Doty, a courteous young man who understands his business.

Above this is the ladies' and children's underwear department, where Mr. Fenton looks after the patrons. Harry Sheehan, who is a great favorite among the ladies, can be found in almost any part of the store where he is needed, though he has sole charge of the corset department. In the dress goods and silk department, situated to the left of the entrance, Jesse Stoner and W. L. Hanna preside. The stock of dress goods just received has many new and novel designs never before seen in Helena, and this department was the center of attraction for the ladies yesterday.

Below the dress goods department comes the flannel department in charge of Mr. Leslie, the domestics in charge of Mr. Fenton. In the center of the spacious store, and what was formerly the rear, is located the cashier's and wrapping department in charge of Miss Hattie Reed. The extreme rear is the counting room, finished in antique oak.

Ascending the elevator to the new second floor an immense room over 100 feet deep is seen. This is well lighted and filled with carpets of every description neatly arranged, and tapestries of every price and description. Half of the floor is devoted to the cloak department, in charge of P. J. Sheehorn. Here cloaks, suit garments, plus newmarkets in endless variety are seen, as well as novelties in jackets and shawls. Lace curtains in abundance are also to be seen here, some of which are very expensive and elegant. In the basement is an immense stock of wall paper, blankets, linoleums and goods of every description, the place being filled with all it can hold.

The improvements to the building have just been completed, and the elegant stock of goods has not half been displayed, but for the next three days the corps of employees will be engaged in arranging for a grand opening which will begin Wednesday, when the finest display of dry goods, in the handsomest store in Montana, will be exhibited.

Called Back.

Those of our citizens who have time to study the bill-boards, may have noticed pictures of a procession of bears without out knowing their meaning. These bears, it seems, are supposed to be trading their way towards Chicago, carrying back the eastern-made soap that our people would not have after they had once used Montana's Own Soap.

The disappointed feelings of the bears may be judged by their pained expression of countenance.

THE SALVATION ARMY.

Another Lively Meeting Held at the Barracks Last Night.

Members of the Salvation Army do not fraternize like soldiers of the cross as they should. Captain Keefe is the disturbing element. Some time ago Capt. Ramsdale came from the Pacific coast department bearing a commission superseding Capt. Keefe at this station. Capt. Keefe retired from active work but refused to go to Portland, Ore., where she was ordered, and she remains in Helena a thorn in the sides of the members of the barracks at this place. During Capt. Keefe's command of the Helena forces she made many friends who still stick to her. Of course, in the long run, she will be tried for insubordination and degraded to the ranks, but just now her craft carries a black flag. She does not ask for quarter nor will she give any. She created a sensation Thursday night last by making a thrilling speech in which she said she would yet have her rights, for Brig.-Gen. Fielding would be here and settle matters satisfactorily to her.

Friday night Adjutant Harris took the stand and in commenting upon Capt. Keefe's speech said he saw no reason why people should be. Capt. Keefe was not present. It was stated that she was by the INDEPENDENT, but it was a mistake. But Capt. Keefe was present last night. She sat among the crowd and lovely in the audience. Capt. Ramsdale in an address made an allusion to an article in this paper and characterized it as a base fabrication. Capt. Keefe sprang upon the platform and announced that she had been saved. Adjutant Harris said, "Fire another volley," but no volley was fired because no collection had been taken up. The captain then proceeded to address the audience and soon was receiving vociferous cheers. Thinking that she was being slighted Capt. Ramsdale ordered Private Chandler to strike up a song. The private did as ordered and Capt. Ramsdale's faction joined in with drums and tambourines.

The audience, whose sympathies are with Capt. Keefe, seeing she was getting the worst of it, joined in with howls, yells, catcalls, whistles, stamping of feet and shouts which so disconcerted Capt. Ramsdale's followers that they laid down their timbrels and listened to Capt. Keefe's eloquent discourse. After she had finished she was greeted with a wild hurrah of applause.

The light still shone brightly on the faces of Brig.-Gen. Fielding arrives there will have to be two barracks.

The Grand Army's Next Candidate for the Pension Bureau.

According to many papers it seems as though the idea of giving the pension bureau to a Grand Army man was for the purpose of squeezing the surplus. If that is all, it can be better done by the Empire Wringer, made at Auburn, N. Y., and it will not break the back of the administration, as it is warranted to work so easily that a feeble woman can wring out an entire wash without fatigue. This claim can only be made by the Empire, Auburn, N. Y.
